How To Create a Sequin Necklace

Supplies: Sequins, Resin Mix, Mold, Jewelry Bail, Jewelry Glue, Ribbon, Measuring Cup & Scissors

1. Following manufacturer's instructions, mix resin. Carefully, pour just enough resin to fill bottom 1/4" of mold. Let resin thoroughly cure overnight.

2. Fill mold with sequins and slowly pour more resin into mold encapsulating all the sequins. Let dry thoroughly overnight. Tip: If necessary, use an embossing tool to remove any air bubbles.

3. To finish necklace, first make the pendant by gently popping out cured resin and securing bail to backside of resin with jewelry glue. Once glue is dry, simply thread ribbon through bail and tie off ends of ribbon to prevent it from slipping out.

Sequins...they're not just for clothing anymore! Take them off the hanger, and turn them into a houseful of quirky décor. Play mix and match with mediums—we embellished everything from kitchen towels, to paper mache letters, to faux fruit.

hot glue revue »

Turn paper mache into a razzle-dazzle display! This shimmering sequin border was applied along the edge of a letter in a snap with a hot glue gun.

just pin it »

Working with a soft, dense material? Try tacking on some shine with the help of simple sequin pins. That's just what we did for this fabulous silk fruit!

There's nothing dowdy about these showy, glowy projects. Restyled in a snap with fabulous sequins, every piece (kitchen chair included) went from old to bold with hardly any effort.

mixed bag »

This plain canvas bag got a boutique-style boost with a flashy geometric design. It features metallic-toned sequins, accented with tiny seed beads and adhered with durable fabric glue.

loaded dice »

These fancy dice are the ultimate in fun and quirky home décor. They're made from simple foam squares and pinned with a bevy of black and white sequins.

shoe in »

Who could resist these ruby red slippers? The scuffed-up pumps were thrift store finds, but now they're out on the town with row after row of garnet-colored sequins (held in place with jewelry adhesive).

wall re-style »

Can't find a canvas to contain your super-sequined sense of style? That means it's time to hit the wall! Apply an over-the-top design like this one with the help of repositionable tape.
