

Who would guess these darling lanterns were once just ordinary soup cans?

We removed the labels and painted the metal to match our party décor, then we used an awl and hammer to punch a simple pattern of holes for candlelight to twinkle through. Dangled from loops of ribbon and a colorful bead garland (made from painted wood beads and acrylic baubles), they make the perfect party lanterns!

A trio of painted candleholders add joyful ambiance to your table.
Just like their lantern cousins, they're made from painted soup cans, and dotted with tiny holes made with an awl and hammer.

Hitch your wagon to a merry rainbow of stripes & polka-dots.
Breathe new life and purpose to a cherished childhood wagon with a little paint and imagination... it's easy as pie! Use your freshly-appointed wagon to chill the soda, hold the gifts, help clear the table — even give Sadie a ride!

This playful buffet is an elegant addition to an imaginative room with its playful designs and soft color palette.

Put back the fun in functional with this handy fabric memo board & hand-painted frame.

Joyfully displayed on a coordinating easel, it can hold a menu, place cards, recipes even family photos.

A dramatic candelabra goes from formal to friendly with an easy stroke of a paintbrush.

We began with a simple, black wrought iron candelabra, and used leftover acrylic paints to transform it to a coordinating decorative accessory.

A little detail adds a lot of personality!

This playful garland is dotted with wood beads that have been painted to match our bright dining décor and mixed with a variety of glass beads.
