1. With a globe pendant (attached to a clasp that's attached to the center chain link), coin charms and DIY bead charms, you're ready for every day's adventure.
2. Double the focal pieces, double the charm. Cut the chain to attach the pocket watch to the center, then add DIY bead clusters and a filigree connector wherever you please.
3. A simply stunning necklace in two steps:
  - 1) Cut the chain at the center link and use jump rings to attach a hammered ring.
  - 2) Use jump rings to attach desired charms.

4. When it's jewelry-making time, don't be afraid to break all the rules—or to break the chain. Here, we separated the chain at even intervals to add crystal connectors.

5. Naturally beautiful in a snap? Leaf pendants + bead charms (attached to the pendants' existing loops) + ear wires.

6. We filled the pendant with gear charms, glued on a galaxy cabochon, and added beads for this steampunk-meets-space piece. Because anything goes when you're exploring the world of DIY jewelry.

1. When the how-to is as simple as add charms and beads to a wear-ready bracelet, the style can be as out-of-this-world as you like.
2. What do you get when you combine a spaceship pendant with galaxy connectors (dangled from the necklace on a separate length of chain)? A piece you'll love to the moon and back.
3. Pile on the trinkets—like arrows, mini compasses and connector rings—for a piece that will guide you to the height of fashion.
