Say it right with
DECORATED WOOD LETTERS.

Letter Decor

JAVA JOY

The wood panel we used for this DIY mug holder comes with the hooks attached, so you'll need to remove them before painting (we used a patina finish kit). Then paint your letters, adhere them to the panel, and replace the hooks. Coffee, anyone?

FROM THE COVER

Glue magnets to alphabet tiles for a trendy take on message board decor.

Tip: Stick not-in-use tiles to the back so they're out of sight but still on hand.

ELEGANCE IS BLISS

For decor with a little more dimension than paint can offer, try fabric. Trace wood letters onto batting (we used two layers) and fabric (adding  $\frac{3}{4}$ " around). Then cover the letters and add trim around the edges. Finish with sawtooth hangers for easy displaying.

STYLE AWAY

Your style, your space, your rules. We upgraded our wood letters with a combination of paint, wood-burned details and metal leaf. Tip: For extra precision, stencil on the designs before going over them with a fine-tip wood-burning tool.

NUMBER PARTY

The mail carrier won't have any trouble spotting your house with a chic (and easy-to-DIY) address planter. Paint a wood pallet, wood numbers and a metal crate. Then secure everything together, fill with flowers (faux are fine), and rake in the curb-appeal points.

FINEST FLOWERS

Monograms are in. Florals are in. DIYs are in. That means this project is a win, win, win. Simply paint a wood letter (we used a 1:1 mixture of paint and glaze medium), distress it after it dries, and glue on your favorite flowers. It's creativity in bloom at its loveliest.

HI TIME

This nicely neutral piece gets its functionality from a DIY clock and its flair from a painted wood word. The clock face is wooden, so just give it a coat of paint and add the hands and motor. Then screw everything to a painted wood pallet and add the word. Hello, lovely!
