Wood Shapes for Kids

Storybook Suite

A 3D scene she can escape to? It's all about wood shapes. Just decoupage or paint the background, and the shapes will bring it to life.

Tip: Glue shapes to the inside and outside to add depth.

Have a Blast ▶

To give our galaxy shadowbox some dimension, we glued the astronaut and rocket shapes to the glass and the earth to the back panel. Look out, Saturn!

All the Buzz ▶

Painted wood shapes are the key to no-fuss nesting. Like these bees—they effortlessly elevate simple yarn art. Attach them by sandwiching (and hot gluing) yarn between the wood and a piece of felt.

Bow Show ▼

So long, boring plastic bins. For display-able bow storage, dress up a wood plaque with premade (and pre-glittered) letters and wood shapes.

Tip: Ribbons glued to the back make bow hanging a snap.

Home Bloom ▲

Teacher gifts, favors, you name it—wood shapes make great gift toppers. And since they're wooden, they'll stand up to the trek home. Here, we secured a flower to a paper straw with hot glue.

Sea Change ▼

Wood shapes help you tackle a theme—say, under the sea—and make it easy to swap out when the tides change.

What we used: wood panel, Home Decor hooks, decorative netting, wood shapes.

Frame On ◀

Say yeehaw to little one's latest obsession with easy glued-on shapes. They work well on readymade items like this wooden frame (painted to match our theme). Tip: Use super glue for long-lasting stick!

About Face ▼

If you can't beat the toy soldier takeover, join it! You can turn wood crates into army stock with the help of stencils and glued-on army shapes.

Idea: Secure wooden dog tags to crates with ball chain.
